

The way through the woods

Rudyard Kipling was the British writer and poet who wrote The Jungle Book and the Just So Stories, which are still popular with children today. He wrote 'The way through the woods' for a young girl called Christabel, who was a friend of his daughter. When he asked Christabel if she had enjoyed a recent holiday in the New Forest, she told Kipling that she had been frightened of ghosts there. Her remark inspired him to write this poem.

They shut the road through the woods Seventy years ago. Weather and rain have undone it again, And now you would never know 5 There was once a road through the woods Before they planted the trees. It is underneath the coppice and heath And the thin anemones. Only the keeper sees 10 That, where the ring-dove broods, And the badgers roll at ease, There was once a road through the woods.	Yet, if you enter the woods Of a summer evening late, 15 When the night air cools on the trout-ringed pools Where the otter whistles his mate, (They fear not men in the woods, Because they see so few), You will hear the beat of a horse's feet, 20 And the swish of a skirt in the dew, Steadily cantering through The misty solitudes, As though they perfectly knew The old lost road through the woods. 25 But there is no road through the woods.
